

VERITAS CHURCH

After several years of meeting in temporary locations, Veritas Church approached JCorp to design a new long-term home. Expandability and phasing were key considerations to accommodate future church growth, and tight cost constraints had to be considered to get the church into its first permanent home. JCorp developed several designs to guide the client through the design process and options and utilized an innovative twist on a pre-engineered metal building to achieve a unique industrial aesthetic while maintaining a cost-effective project cost.
